Spun Silk

Silk media is a specialty fine art vinyl product with a whisper thin fabric face which was designed to produce a unique density effect in continuous areas. When printed on a solvent based ink jet system, the surface yields a printed result that may best be described as dappled, with higher density areas affected to a greater level than lighter areas. SpunSilk produces a soft, shimmering fabric-like effect that will enhance a particular design or image. The modulating surface character creates subtle differences to each image printed adding a custom look to the printing. This unique surface actually contains a thin spun silk-like material to replicate the look of fine fabric. It is especially suited for creating custom wall covering patterns and textile look images. It is a medium that will stimulate the imagination and creative capabilities of designers and artists and provides the digital printing service with a unique product offering.

NOTE: SpunSilk is not recommended for photographic reproduction or precision color graphics, and may yield a veiled, uneven look where highly saturated color fields are expected. We highly recommend trialing SpunSilk to see if the resultant effects of this product suit your particular project.

Suede Emboss

The Suede embossing effect is similar to suede fabric with its nap and texture. Suede has a light stipple surface that can be utilized for nearly any project. The light texture works well to reduce glare from direct light, while adding a warmth to the print. Suede is a very popular option for wall murals of all kinds because the random natural texture does not interfere with any print.
